

THE MANEATER

THE STUDENT VOICE OF MU SINCE 1955

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 2013

CAMPUS OUTLOOK SPORTS ARTS FORUM BLOGS CLASSIFIEDS

CAMPUS | PUBLISHED JULY 21, 2011 | 0 COMMENTS

MU swimmer's life revolved around swimming, friends

Sasha Menu Courey's swimming coach Patrick Rowan said one could never ignore the swimmer when she was on the pool deck. Menu Courey died June 19. COURTESY OF LYNN COUREY

By Jimmy Hibsich

Tags: Student deaths

Sasha Menu Courey died June 17.

Share via

FACEBOOK

TWITTER

GOOGLE+

MU swimmer Sasha Menu Courey was all about water – whether it be the water she “lived” in or the water she brings to her parents’ eyes as they recall their daughter’s life.

“I really believe she was here to make a difference,” her mother Lynn Courey said.

Menu Courey of Toronto, Canada, died June 17 after a battle with borderline personality disorder.

She was about to enter her junior year as a psychology major. Her mother said she was confident her daughter was going to put her degree to good use helping others.

“If you needed someone to listen to you, Sasha was the first one in line to help out,” Courey said.

The family was touched by all of the stories her daughter’s loved ones have shared with the family. One story in particular encapsulated Menu Courey’s compassionate and caring nature, she said.

“Sasha gave a friend a necklace with a cross that she said had helped her through a hard time,” Courey said. “Her friend gave it back to me at the memorial. She always encouraged her friends to look at the positive side of things.”

This was one of many stories that captured her personality, her mother said. More of these memories have been compiled on a Facebook page, where more than 350 loved ones have gathered to share memories of Menu Courey.

However, kindness toward others wasn’t the only thing that defined Menu Courey. Her scent did that, as well.

“Sasha always smelled like vanilla,” close friend and track athlete Allyson Brown said. “If you walked into a room and you smelled vanilla, you were like, ‘Sasha is here.’”

Aside from her friends and family, Menu Courey’s second love was the pool. She had swam competitively since age 9, making her first national age group time when she was 11. She also held the fastest open short course 50-meter fly swim in Canada when she was 14.

“Everything she did, she needed to do it well,” Courey said.

Her drive led her to about 12 recruitment offers for her swimming, and she ultimately chose MU. Although she wasn’t able to swim her freshman year due to some paperwork troubles, she had been training with the team and swimming time trials in preparation for her sophomore year.

Her coach Patrick Rowan said he’ll always remember the passion and energy she brought to the swimming team. Menu Courey was eager to swim as a part of MU’s relay team, and Rowan said she got extremely excited about competing with her teammates.

“She’s one of those swimmers that when she’s on the pool deck, you knew she was on the pool deck,” he said. “There was definitely no denying her presence. Whether it was her boisterous laugh or her support for her teammates, when Sasha was there you knew it.”

Menu Courey’s close friends planned a memorial June 23 at Stephens Lake Park, a place where she often sought solace. About 40 people came to the memorial, dressed in white T-shirts and sunglasses, which was Menu Courey’s signature outfit.

“When you’re an athlete, you’re all pretty much in your own little world,” Brown said. “Sasha really did know tons of people and you saw that at the memorial. Sasha was a very upbeat, balls-to-the-wall type of girl and she loved to smile, so we didn’t want the memorial to be something sad.”

A little less than a month later, another memorial was held on campus at the Newman Center. Many loved ones said a few words to commemorate Menu Courey there.

Rowan was among those who spoke at the event, and he took a moment to recall his recruiting call with Menu Courey.

“Most recruiting calls to 17-year-olds are short and one-sided with the coach doing most of the talking and the recruit giving quick, timid responses,” he said. “But not Sasha. Her personality and laugh came leaping through the phone. She dominated most of the call. By the end, I was a little worried my battery was going to run out.”

Menu Courey is survived by her father Mike Menu, her mother Lynn Courey and her sister Kayla.

EXPORTED FROM KIRKSVILLE
Summer Session | Online — summer.truman.edu
Convenient • Affordable • Transferable
A quality summer alternative at just the right price.

RELATED ARTICLES

1. MU wrestler Phillip Perry kept a smile on, off mat
2. Carol Sun brought laughter, music to others
3. Menu Courey's parents determined not to let their daughter's death go in vain
4. Strong friendships characterize lost Marching Mizzou members
5. Family recalls senior's good heart, outgoing personality

RELATED BLOG POSTS

1. MU student dies in Illinois Megabus crash
2. Student killed in motorcycle accident
3. Former Missouri football player killed in I-44 crash

ARTICLE COMMENTS

0 COMMENTS

This item does not have any approved comments yet.

POST A COMMENT

» NAME

» EMAIL ADDRESS

» WEBSITE

» COMMENT

POST

PREVIEW

©2013 The
Maneater Student
Newspaper

SECTIONS

Arts
Campus
Forum
Outlook
Sports

MULTIMEDIA

Audio
Podcast
Slideshows
Video

THE MANEATER

Graphics
Layouts
Photos

MOVE MAGAZINE

Blogs
Commentary
Guides
In Town
Multimedia
Music

INFORMATION

About Accuracy
Advertising
Contact us
Get involved
Maneater / Missourian
Order a photo
Scholarships
Staff
Website colophon

FACEBOOK

Maneater Sports
MOVE Magazine
The Maneater

TWITTER

Maneater MOVE
Maneater Sports
The Maneater

GOOGLE+

The Maneater